RANDOM MONDAY

Over on our Facebook page, we like to do this little thing called Facebook Random Question of the Day. And it's exactly that: random. Here's our question: Who would play you in a movie and why? Check out some of the responses we received. Want to be a part of our social media revolution and see your thoughts here next time? Like us at facebook.com/theredeye.

Michael Andrews: Sean Connery. We look nothing alike & our age gap is 50+ years yet I feel this would make for great cinema.

Adam Keeley: Robert Downey Jr. Something about him makes me think he can truly understand and capture the essence of a 23 yr old black male.

Julie Roberts: Julia Roberts naturally :)

James Neville: Charlie sheen ... Because I like winning!!!

April Aquarius Mitchell: Madonna ... because we have lived similar lives ... except for the famous part lol

Vanessa Luis: The actress that played Hilary Banks. Apparently I talk, act and look like her so why not Kevin James: I would play myself. If Howard Stern can do it why cant I?

Lollapalooza this weekend celebrated its 20th birthday—and its seventh straight year in Grant Park—with more than 270,000 people taking in more than 130 acts on multiple stages. With rain and mud coloring much of Sunday, the fest closed its third and final day with performances by Deadmau5, Cold War Kids, Kid Cudi and Foo Fighters. Here are some of RedEye's favorite pics from the weekend.

JUMPERS UP

Lollapalooza organizers said this year saw a record number of fence jumpers. "Groups estimated as large as 200-300 have been reported by staff as forming in areas along the perimeter. Site crews now continuously work the fence line making repairs to fence panels that have been broken and or cut by groups and individuals," organizers said in a statement. TRIBUNE

TWEET OF THE WEEK

@strobegold:
 An autobiography without punctuation is a life sentence.

Do you have more Klout than Obama?

Do you have Klout?

Stop scratching your arms. It's not a rash. It's the measurement of your overall online influence, and if you use Twitter, Facebook and other social media platforms regularly, it probably wouldn't hurt to sign up and check your score.

The scores range on a scale of 1-100, with higher scores reserved for people who have a wider and stronger sphere of influence. Klout says it calculates more than 35 variables on Facebook and Twitter. Recently, Klout started to count LinkedIn and Foursquare toward the score, with YouTube, Facebook Pages and Google+ all promised soon.

I'm often asked how much attention people should pay to Klout scores. I'd say some. Klout's cool, but it's far from perfect. For example, Justin Bieber's Klout score is a perfect 100 and it never seems to fluctuate, although your score likely will from day to day depending on your Twitter usage and online mentions.

According to Klout, 100 is celebrity status. "You can't get any more influential than this. People hang on your every word and share your content like no other. You're probably famous in real life."

As far as I'm concerned, only that last part is accurate. Do you hang on every word Justin Bieber says? I hope not, unless you're a giddy middle-schooler. As a comparison, President Obama's Klout score is 89.

Nothing bad will happen if you don't know your Klout score, although I've heard of employers in the social media space considering Klout scores when hiring.

Can your Klout score get you certain perks with brands that consider you influential? Yes. A recent Klout perk offered some people $10 Subway gift cards to try the chain's new BBQ Pulled Pork sub.

Will your Klout score get you a date with the hottie at the end of the bar? No, not unless the bar you go to is the most awesome bar in the history of the universe (and then I'm going to need you to give me directions).

The whole concept of an online social score is a little weird. Think about it: It takes into account what you do on Facebook. If Klout existed when I was in high school, a high score would have gotten me shoved into a locker. And now, some of those shovers are friends with me on Facebook. Ah, the circle of life.

Anyhow, let's compare Klout scores. Sign up if you haven't already at klout.com and tweet me your score. And when you see the link to this column, retweet it because that could increase both our scores.

Now that's a perk. SCOTT KLEINBERG IS REDEYE'S SOCIAL MEDIA DIRECTOR AND WEB EDITOR. HIS KLOUT SCORE IS 66.

Lead levels still a concern

Chicago Tribune

Though Chicago and other cities have long reported that lead levels in their water meet federal standards, regulators and scientists worry testing methods used for two decades could significantly underestimate consumers' exposure to the toxic metal.

Recent test results in Chicago may back up those fears: High lead levels were found in drinking water in seven of 38 Chicago homes tested by federal regulators this spring, according to records obtained by the Tribune.

"That's not really good news," said Marc Edwards, an environmental engineering professor at Virginia Tech who researches lead in water. The testing suggests lead in water could be a "significant human health concern," he said.

Environmental Protection Agency officials are still analyzing the tests, but the results give credence to concerns voiced by advocates and scientists that lead could be an underestimated health risk in the nation's drinking water, especially in older cities and suburbs where lead pipe and solder are common.

The results also speak to concerns that utilities can "miss" lead when testing water by using certain permitted techniques, such as flushing pipes the night before samples are taken.

Under federal law, local utilities must test water in a relatively small sample of homes. If lead concentrations exceed 15 parts per billion in more than 10 percent of water samples, the utilities must alert residents and try to lower levels. The city of Chicago hasn't exceeded the lead limit in nearly 20 years.

The allowable amount of lead was set in the 1990s and is based on a level utilities could feasibly meet. It is not a health-based standard, and many health and environment experts think the level allowed is too high.

Experts say there is no safe level of exposure to lead, which has been known to cause diminished IQs in children, even at low levels, and heart attacks and strokes in adults.

FAUCET REPORT

SEX HORMONES, DRUGS FOUND IN OUR DRINKING WATER

Chicago Tribune

What's in your water?

Trace amounts of sex hormones, prescription drugs, flame retardants and herbicides are being detected in treated drinking water pumped to more than 7 million people in Chicago and its suburbs.

In the latest round of testing prompted by a 2008 Tribune and RedEye investigation, city officials discovered that more than two dozen pharmaceutical drugs and other unregulated chemicals pass through Chicago's massive treatment plants.

Little is known about potential health effects from drinking drug-contaminated water, but scientists and regulators increasingly are concerned about long-term exposure, even at very low levels.

"We need to start addressing the cumulative effects that these low-dose exposures could be having on people," said Thomas Burke, associate dean of the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health.

"There are no quick solutions," said Burke, who chaired a National Academy of Sciences committee that called for a dramatic overhaul of the way the U.S. regulates toxic chemicals. "But we need a new approach that is more responsive to emerging science."

Like other cities, Chicago must notify the public if its drinking water contains regulated contaminants, including lead, pesticides and harmful bacteria.

There is no such requirement if pharmaceuticals and other unregulated substances are detected.

Annual water quality reports mailed last month to people in Chicago and the suburbs noted that the city is testing for substances that aren't on the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's list of regulated contaminants.

A list of results obtained by the Tribune is dated April 11 but wasn't posted on the city's website until after the newspaper asked for it last week.

City officials were prompted to start testing

HOW TO TAKE ACTION

Drug disposal: The detection of pharmaceuticals in water has prompted new advice about how to properly dispose of unused medicine. The Illinois EPA recommends taking it to collection events for household hazardous waste. If that is not practical, you can place unused drugs in the trash after grinding them up and mixing them with coffee grounds or cat box filler so they can't be stolen. Questions? Email the agency at epa.meds.mail@illinois.gov.

Filters: Conventional water treatment does not screen out many unregulated contaminants, but some household filters can help. Water filtration products are certified by NSF International, a non-profit group. Visit nsf.org. TRIBUNE for the substances after the Tribune and RedEye found trace amounts of pharmaceuticals, residue from personal care products and unregulated industrial chemicals in local tap water.

Substances found in the city's latest tests include the sex hormones testosterone and progesterone; gemfibrozil, a prescription cholesterol-fighting drug; and DEET, the active ingredient in bug spray.

The tests also found perfluorooctane sulfonate, an ingredient in Scotchgard stain-fighting coatings; bisphenol A, a hormonelike plastics

DRUGS IN OUR WATER

Tests in Chicago and other cities are finding that treated drinking water contains trace amounts of pharmaceutical drugs, residue from personal care products and other unregulated contaminants. The potential health effects are unclear, but there are concerns about long-term exposure to a large variety of substances. Below are some of the chemicals recently found in Chicago's tap water.

Contaminant	Brand/common name	Common use
Bisphenol A	BPA	Production of plastics
cis-Testosterone	Epitestosterone	Steroid hormone
Dehydronifedipine		Blood pressure drug byproduct
Gemfibrozil	Lopid	Cholesterol medication
Ibuprofen	Advil	Pain reliever
Meprobamate	Equaril, Trancot	Anti-anxiety medication
N,N-diethyl-m-toluamide	DEET	Insect repellent
Perfluorooctane sulfonate		Ingredient of Scotchgard
Phenytoin	Dilantin	Seizure medication
Progesterone		Steroid hormone
Simazine	Aquazine	Agricultural herbicide

additive; and tris (2-butoxyethyl) phosphate, a flame retardant chemical.

“Our very awareness of trace amounts of these chemicals comes in large part because we are aggressively conducting research on water quality and safety,” said Tom LaPorte, a spokesman for the Chicago Department of Water Management.

Drugs end up in drinking water after people take medicines and residue pass through their bodies down the toilet. Conventional sewage and water treatment filters out some of the substances, or at least reduces the concentrations, but studies have found that small amounts still get through.

Although treated sewage from the Chicago area drains away from Lake Michigan, more than 300 other cities discharge treated waste and untreated sewage overflows into the lake and its tributaries, according to the EPA.

“Exposure to some of these chemicals ... is cause for consternation for people and concern over fish and wildlife impacts,” said Rebecca Klaper, a researcher at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee who studies the Great Lakes.

The EPA’s position is that it doesn’t yet have enough evidence to limit pharmaceuticals and many other unregulated chemicals in drinking water. Water officials say not enough is known to justify spending millions of taxpayer dollars to upgrade treatment plants.

Element of ‘Brockovich’ pollutant in city testing

Chicago Tribune

Chicago’s first round of testing for a toxic metal called hexavalent chromium found that levels in local drinking water are more than 11 times higher than a health standard California adopted last month.

Federal officials are being nudged to act by California, which took a three-year look at the science and last month established the nation’s first “public health goal” to limit hexavalent chromium, an industrial pollutant made infamous by the 2000 movie “Erin Brockovich.”

But it could take years before anything is done about chromium contamination in Chicago and scores of other cities, in part because industrial polluters and municipal water utilities are lobbying to block or delay the Obama administration’s move toward national regulations.

The discovery of hexavalent chromium in drinking water is renewing a debate about dozens of unregulated substances that are showing up in water supplies nationwide. Researchers say there is strong evidence that years of exposure to chromium-contaminated water can cause stomach cancer.

Test results obtained by the Tribune show that treated Lake Michigan water pumped to 7 million people in Chicago and its suburbs contains up to 0.23 parts per billion of the toxic metal, well above an amount that researchers say could increase the long-term risk of cancer.

Chicago began quarterly testing for the dangerous form of chromium this year after the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency urged cities to track it while the Obama administration wraps up a scientific review—the first step toward a national standard.

The California Office of Environmental Health Hazard Assessment defines the goal, 0.02 parts per billion, as an amount that reduces the risk of developing cancer to a point considered negligible by most scientists and physicians. Studies show that exposure to the metal also increases the risk of reproductive problems, interferes with childhood development and causes liver and kidney damage.

'A lovely little girl'

6-year-old gunned down while sleeping on couch in Englewood

Chicago Tribune

Six-year-old Arianna Gibson couldn't wait to return to school Monday.

Beginning first grade at Libby Elementary School was all the young girl could talk about this summer and at her grandmother's block party Saturday in Englewood. The bubbly, polite Arianna loved to read, write her name and count money, friends and family said.

"She loved school. She loved everything," said Arianna's mother, Demitta Collins, 34. "She was just a lovely little girl."

After falling asleep on the couch to the movie "The Temptations," Arianna was fatally shot around 6 a.m. Sunday when someone walked up to the front porch of the one-story brick bungalow and fired a gun through the living room window, police said.

Two others were wounded during the incident in the 7400 block of South Sangamon Street. As of Sunday, no one was in custody, and Wentworth Area detectives were still investigating, police said.

Stacey Jones, 17, who lives at the home, was shot in the ankle, and a 17-year-old man, whose name was not released by authorities, was wounded on the side of his body, family said. The teenagers underwent surgeries to remove the bullets and are expected to survive.

Family members said the teenage male is a friend who entered the home sometime after 4 a.m., when neighbors unofficially ended the festivities. They believe he was the target.

As soon as she heard the shots, Linda Chatman, 36, a family friend who lives at the home, ushered sleeping children from the living and dining rooms into a nearby bedroom.

Arianna initially stood up in the bedroom but quickly slumped down on her abdomen as blood started gushing from her side, Chatman said. Though the girl was still breathing when paramedics arrived, neighbors said they realized she didn't make it when police began placing red tape around the home.

The incident left the neighborhood at a loss. Residents stood on porches and front lawns wondering why a child was killed after a family-friendly block party that went just as planned.

At the party, children competed in egg races and water balloon contests while neighbors passed out school supplies. Arianna, whose face was painted like a clown, ran from house to house to greet people as she helped unwrap Popsicles for youngsters.

"She was smiling the whole time," recalled neighbor Derrick Washington, 14. "She seemed like a good little girl."

11 hurt in crash involving SUV, car

Eleven people were hurt Sunday in a two-vehicle crash in Gage Park, according to the Chicago Fire Department. The crash happened at 55th and Richmond streets just before 3 p.m. and involved an SUV and a car.

Teen arrested on Mag Mile

A 15-year-old boy was arrested Saturday night on the Magnificent Mile and charged with felony mob action after a police officer saw him and several other people beating a person on the ground, police said.

2 dead after vehicle crosses into traffic

Police were investigating a crash on Interstate 88 in Lisle on Saturday that killed two and seriously injured two. A car traveling eastbound crossed into the westbound lanes where the crash occurred.

2 injured on LSD near Lolla

Two men were seriously injured Saturday when they were struck by a vehicle on Lake Shore Drive, just east of Buckingham Fountain and Lollapalooza. Paramedics responded about 8:45 p.m.

Cyclist killed downtown

A 25-year-old woman riding a bicycle was run over and killed by a truck Friday night in downtown Chicago after losing her balance and falling underneath the truck, police said. The incident happened at 227 N. Wabash Ave. TRIBUNE

Riots rage in north London

1 Anger at high unemployment and cuts in public services, coupled with resentment of the police, contributed to an explosion of violence and looting in the deprived north London neighborhood of Tottenham, residents said Sunday.

Evacuations for storm

2 China moved more than 600,000 residents along coastal areas and sent ships back to port as it braced for tropical storm Muifa, which pounded some areas with gusty winds and rains over the weekend, state media reported Sunday.

Calls for strike at Verizon

3 Unions representing 45,000 Verizon Communications workers called for a strike as negotiations failed for a new labor contract that expired at midnight Saturday. Verizon and the unions had been in talks since late June.

8 killed in Cleveland

4 A man shot and killed seven people, including an 11-year-old, after a domestic dispute turned violent Sunday, police said. The shooter was later shot and killed by police, according to a police dispatcher who declined to be identified.

Wild weather in forecast

More extreme weather was expected across the country Sunday, as parts of the Midwest and Northeast faced possible flooding from slow-moving storms while blistering triple-digit temperatures were expected in coastal Southeastern states.

103 miles

Veteran long-distance swimmer Diana Nyad was scheduled to take on time and Mother Nature when she jumped into the Florida Straits on Sunday to begin what would be a world record swim from Cuba to Florida (103 miles).

Troops killed in crash were targeting Taliban

5 KABUL, Afghanistan The American commandos who died when their helicopter crashed in eastern Afghanistan were targeting a Taliban commander directly responsible for attacks on U.S. troops, military officials with knowledge of the operation said Sunday.

The crash killed 30 U.S. service members, the Afghan war's worst single-day American toll. Among the dead were 22 Navy SEALs who were being flown in to assist an Army Rangers unit pinned down by enemy fire.

The current whereabouts of the Taliban leader targeted in the raid were unclear, said the military officials, who declined to be identified because of the sensitivity of ongoing operations in the crash area.

One civilian translator and seven Afghan commandos also were killed in the crash, officials said. NATO troops were still combing through the wreckage of the downed helicopter Sunday, said Lt. Col. Jimmie Cummings, a spokesman for the International Security Assistance Force in Afghanistan.

Elsewhere, four other NATO soldiers were killed in separate insurgent attacks Sunday. Their deaths add to a heavy blow against American military operations in the region just as NATO troops are drawing down and a handover to Afghan security forces is under way.

The majority of the SEALs—considered to be among America's most elite warriors—belonged to the same covert unit that conducted the May raid that killed Osama bin Laden, though they were not the same men, a U.S. military official said.

Why U.S. lost its top-notch credit rating

The U.S. lost its top-tier AAA credit rating from the Standard & Poor's agency Friday, a move that will affect the country's borrowing costs and investor opinion of U.S. assets. Here is what the downgrade means for investors, consumers and the country.

What is a downgrade? Standard & Poor's, one of the three major credit rating agencies that assign scores to debt issued by institutions, municipalities and governments, said there is a heightened degree of risk in holding debt issued by the U.S. So it lowered its rating from AAA, the highest possible level, by one notch to AA+.

Why did it lower the rating? The credit rating agency believes the outstanding debt of $14.3 trillion and projected deficits for coming years in the U.S. no longer warrant the top-tier rating that it had assigned to the U.S. since 1941.

But wasn't a debt deal just signed in Congress? Yes, but the savings from this are projected at $2.1 trillion. S&P has said that a larger level of savings is needed—at least $4 trillion either through spending reductions or tax increases—in order to start lowering U.S. deficits in coming years.

The empty turf at Soldier Field after the Bears' Family Fest was canceled.

ATH-TWEETS

Bears players made their Soldier Field opinions known on Twitter too.

Robbie Gould

@RobbieGould09

"Field conditions this bad this early in the season is inexcusable. This is becoming a reoccurring problem and needs addressed."

Chris Harris

@ChrisHarrisNFL

"Headed back to ONU to practice tonight. Can someone explain to me how a NAIA college practice field is better than Soldier Field #confused"

Kahlil Bell

@KahlilBell32

"Sorry fans. Looks like we have to wait till next time."

Henry Melton

@HenMel

"o and dont let @spice-adams confuse u he definitely ruined the soldier field grass he was hungry"

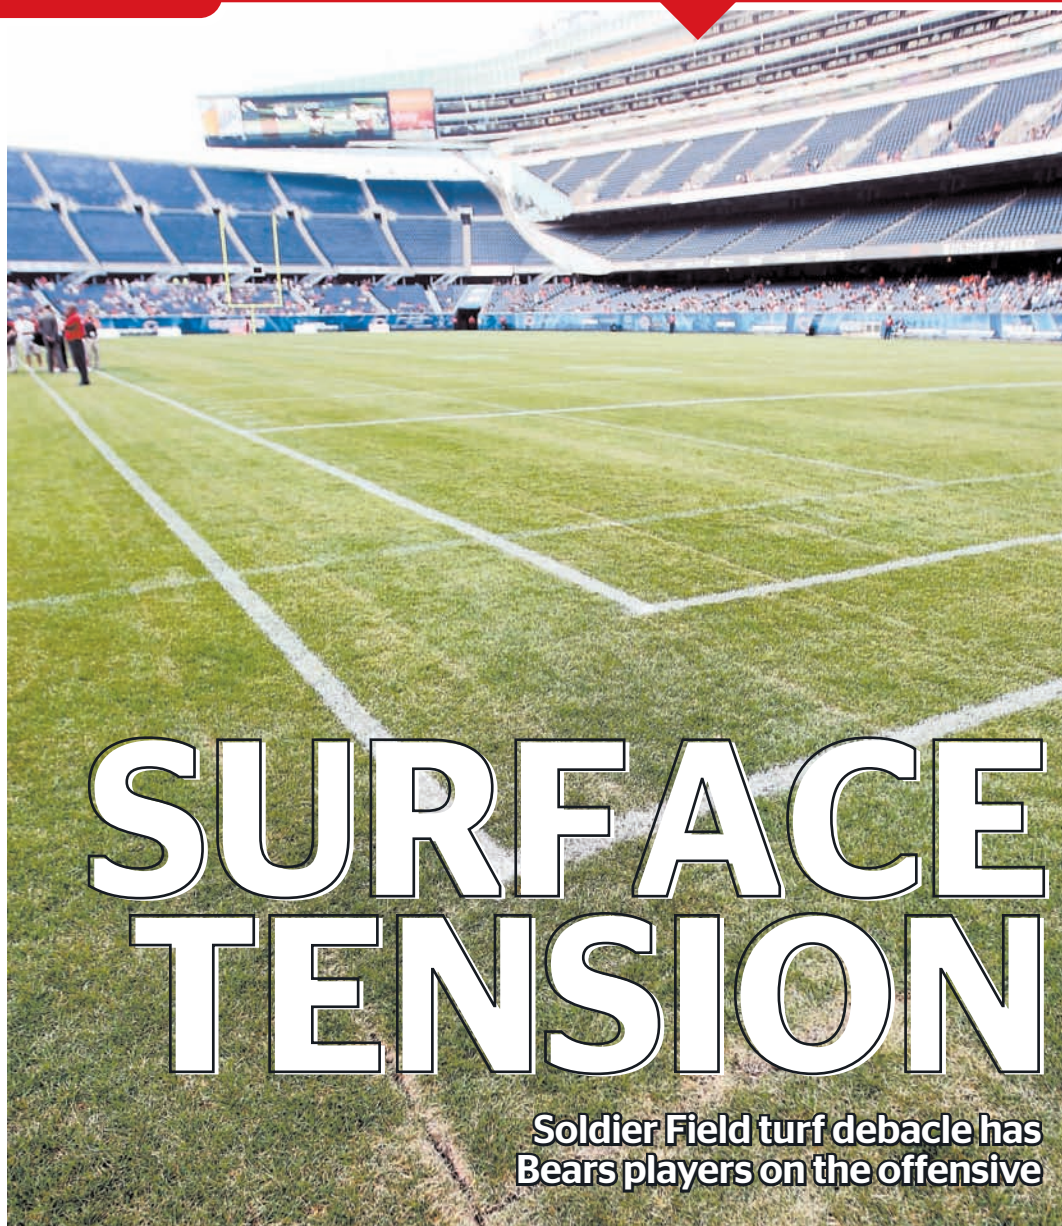

Caleb Hanie

@CalebHanie12

"Ok wow...our field is "not in good enough shape" to practice on tonight....unbelievable...we need some turf."

Soldier Field turf debacle has Bears players on the offensive

RedEye

Here we grow again.

The much-maligned Soldier Field sod that often has been a thorn in the Bears' side was deemed unsafe for practice Friday night, ruining Family Fest.

And Bears players weren't happy about it.

"It's a joke," star linebacker Brian Urlacher said Saturday. "I don't understand (why) they can't have the field ready. It sucks for the fans because I'm sure it was a pain in the butt to get down there with all the traffic and everything."

Several Bears said they'd like to play on artificial turf instead of the sod that often is a problem in November and December.

Kicker Robbie Gould said the Soldier Field grass "isn't the best surface to play on."

"I don't understand why they don't have Field-Turf, yet," Urlacher told The Associated Press. "We're a fast team. We play fast on FieldTurf. The injury issues aren't as bad as they used to be (with artificial turf). They've gone down a lot in the last few years with the way they made the turf and stuff. So I don't understand it."

"I like artificial grass: no pot holes, no dips in the ground, and things like that," wide receiver Devin Hester said, according to the AP.

Turf luck

The Bears couldn't practice on Soldier Field's playing surface. That's OK, these five don't practice either—and it shows.

1 How would you solve Soldier Field's turf issues?	Just switch to ice. Opponents will never see it coming.	Give little Timmy next door 20 bucks to water the lawn since the Park District can't.	Move Soldier Field above rec league softball fields on the Park District's priority list.	Chia pet seeds. The NFL field that grows. Ch-ch-ch-chia!	Me and my friends could drop off some "fertilizer."
2 How concerned are you about Matt Forte's threat to sit out preseason games?	About as concerned as I am that Brian Urlacher won't have any tackles this season.	The games still don't count, right? Then I'm not concerned.	About as concerned as I am about the Bears' preseason record.	Actually hope the threat is a promise. Bad field. Bad O-line. Meaningless football.	Not worried. Haven't you heard, we have Marion the Barbarian to back him up—or take his job.
3 What's the secret behind the Cubs' recent winning ways?	They must have made those discounted beers at Wrigley available to the players.	Two words: No. Pressure.	You know what they say: When the going gets meaningless, the meaningless get going.	I'm Sori. This team is still for the Byrds, is not Wells and makes me ZZZZZZZ. We need more Starlins.	The Cubs finally grew up to become the bears they were supposed to be.
4 Why are some Pittsburgh Steelers guest-starring in the new Batman movie?	Because in the past week, Pirates games have become unwatchable again. Poor Pittsburgh.	Ben Roethlisberger is playing a new villain called "The Diddler."	Ben Roethlisberger is a more despicable villain than anything Hollywood could come up with.	Every Batman movie needs a bad guy. This one gives you Ben Roethlisberger.	No one told them the NFL lockout is over.
5 Tiger Woods fizzled out again. What's the future hold for him?	Swimming in gold coins, Scrooge McDuck-style, I'm guessing.	That's what she said. Sorry, couldn't help myself.	A whole lot of lying on his piles of money and fornicating with supermodels. What a shame.	If he's fizzling, it means Kenny Williams could be ready to offer him a $60 million deal.	Another Monday mourning.

White Sox attempting to hit the reset button on Adam Dunn—again

Disgruntled White Sox fans might not be able to give struggling slugger Adam Dunn a break, but Ozzie Guillen is. Literally.

Guillen said Sunday he might be ready to give Dunn another round of time on the bench after he struck out three times Saturday night in Minnesota.

"I'm going to talk to him today or maybe tomorrow about giving him a mental break," Guillen said. "It's the second one because I already gave him one. He swung the bat a little better in Chicago, but last couple days he lost it."

"It's kind of hard. He already should know he has a bad season. I think he should throw everything away and see what he can do the next 1½ months."

Dunn, 31, received two days off June 7-8 after his average dropped to .176. Now it's even worse. Here's a look at Dunn's season by the not-so-great numbers.

TRACY'S TRIPPIN'

RedEye reporter Tracy Swartz is visiting nine major-league ballparks in nine days. On Sunday, she was at Boston's Fenway Park. Here's her puncard to Chicago.

Project Fenway began with a Yankees shirt. My first apartment in New York, in 2004, was in Washington Heights, a northern Manhattan neighborhood near the Bronx.

So for the Yankees vs. Red Sox game Sunday in Boston, I created a navy blue shirt: "Yankee Chief."

A quick way to get noticed bar hopping outside Fenway? Wear a Yankees shirt. Even quicker way? Wear a punny Yankees shirt. Project Punway: One day you're in, the next day you're outs.

RedEye readers, finally a topic close to my heart. Grass. No, not the kind I smoke. I mean, er, not the recreational drug. No way. I'm talking about the playing surface at Soldier Field. I've conducted my business on various vegetation-covered surfaces, and I wouldn't take my business to Soldier Field if you paid me. Would you pay me?

REMEMBER THE IVERSON

The sod issues at Soldier Field cost fans a chance to see the Bears practice. We're not talking about a game. We're talking about practice. What's gonna happen in the middle of December? That's not exactly grass-growing season.

IN THE DOGHOUSE

The Cubs' win streak prompted manager Mike Quade to say "why not?" when asked if he could see most of the current season's players back next season. Nobody likes a fifth-place team more than Quade.

TREATED

Matt Forte, I don't blame you if you sit out pre-season games until you get a new contract. You deserve to be paid more than your backups.

Dinner dates

You've gotta eat—why not meet new people while you're at it?

By Allison Rothschild

Romance isn't dead, sugar, it's just out to dinner. In fact, one of the hottest ways to meet new people is on the Chicago dining club circuit. These groups get together to eat, drink and chat at restaurants around town (or at a farm, as sometimes is the case with the City Provisions supper club). All it takes is an easier-than-Groupon click of the mouse to get signed up. Here are some groups to get you started meeting like-minded people—singles welcome.

Duck Duck Dish

Duck Duck Dish is full of go-getters. The month-old group was started by Nate Lassiter, who met some fellow entrepreneurs and food lovers at Startup Weekend Chicago. "We call ourselves social dining. ... You can go with friends or go by yourself and meet others," Lassiter said. One of the foodie features of Duck Duck Dish is that the dinners and tastings will involve meet-and-greets with the chef. "[Duck Duck Dish] is a great way for people to get together and sample new restaurants," said Charlie Barone, general manager of West Town's Frontier, which has hosted the dining club. "It's using the restaurant as an experience."

Date factor: "The idea is very social in nature; you're bound to meet people," Lassiter said. It doesn't hurt that some of the next events are wine and tequila tastings. Sign up on the website to receive invites.

Grub With Us
grubwithus.com

This popular dining club started in August 2010, when the co-founders moved to Chicago and realized they didn't know anyone. "We wanted a non-awkward way to meet new people," said Sen Sugano, development director of Grub With Us. "Food is just comfortable—you have to eat."

Recent dinner spots: Tutto Italiano, The Rice Table, Le Colonial

Date factor: "We once had a frequent user that stopped using the site, and we contacted them to make sure everything was OK. She said everything was great, and that she had met someone through a dinner. We're not a dating site, but things happen organically," Sugano said.

City Provisions

Chef and owner Cleetus Friedman hosts wintertime supper clubs at his deli in Ravenswood, but during the summer, he puts a group of people on a bus for a whole evening of activity. "We go the farm, there is a tour of the farm and then I make dinner!" Friedman said. (Last month, his dinner at La Pryor Farms in Ottawa, Ill., resulted in an explosive pork roll, layering pork belly, prosciutto and smoked pork shoulder.)

Next dinner: Aug. 27 at Heritage Prairie Farm in far west suburban La Fox. Supper club returns to City Provisions deli in September.

Date factor: "We get a lot of singles," Friedman said. "Our farm dinners start as 40 strangers and end as 40 friends."

Move to Stop
the Cycle of Child Abuse.

The Juvenile Protective Association (JPA) is proud to be holding the 3rd annual JPA 5K Run/Walk. The race will be followed by a post race celebration with music and festivities.

The JPA is a non-profit agency devoted to protecting children, healing the scars of abuse and neglect, and repairing families. We provide intervention and treatment to break the intergenerational cycle in families that abuse or neglect their children.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Leo

July 23-Aug. 22
Three planets are teaming up to make your bedroom fantasies come true. Finally, your girlfriend will agree to a threesome. Things are looking up.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Take it easy this week. Mercury still is putting a monkey wrench in your love life. Your new boyfriend might decide to get back with his ex. Try not to panic.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Saturn is returning some good karma. That former flame who broke your heart will decide that you were the love of her life and ask you to marry her. Or maybe something less exciting will happen—you'll find an uneaten candy bar in your pocket.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You'll need to set some limits as Mars makes it clear that a certain person is out of line. No, it's not OK for your boyfriend to invite his ex-girlfriend over to the new apartment you're sharing with him. Stand your ground.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

The sun is encouraging you to show off. Crash a neighbor's backyard barbecue and flirt with strangers. Your ego needs a boost.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You're so focused on work and money that your lover might have one foot out the door. Try to find a better balance between making money and maintaining a personal life. The moon says it really doesn't have to be just one or the other.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

With three planets opposite your sign, everything is annoying you. It's probably time to throw a major hissy fit.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Sometimes you can be a total square in the bedroom. It's lights out, missionary position and a nice snooze 10 minutes after sex is over. You do know that this isn't really working for your partner, don't you? Mars is advising you to give this some serious thought.

Aries March 21-April 19

A minor flirtation might turn explosive as the moon heats up things. You weren't sure if you wanted to sleep with that guy, but now you're obsessing over him.

Taurus April 20-May 20

You've been stuck in a social rut for a long time, hanging out with a select group of friends. Stop being so boring. Get out and meet some people. Pluto says it will be worth your time.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Someone is going to piss you off this week, and it probably will be that on-again, off-again lover. Venus is reminding you that you can't expect someone's full attention if you don't return it.

Cancer June 22-July 22

With Mars moving into your sign, you're morphing into an aggressive kitten. Usually you're the peacemaking type, but now you're all "Meow! Hiss!" to your sweetheart. Fortunately, you're still adorable.

NOW HIRING IN LAKESHORE EAST

Full-time and part-time positions with flexible hours available.

Mariano's Fresh Market is opening an extraordinary new grocery store in Lakeshore East this September. Our new store will be located at 333. E. Benton Pl. in downtown Chicago, near Michigan and Randolph. If you love food and have a knack for connecting with people, we're interested in you!

We're hiring team members for the following positions:

Barista	Hot Foods Clerk	Deli Clerk
Demo Clerk	Replenishment (3rd Shift)	Pricing
Produce Clerk	Cashier	Cheese Specialist
Bakery Clerk	General/Bagger	Liquor Clerk
Floral Designer	Salad Bar Clerk	Stocker
Receiving Clerk	Meat/Seafood Counter	Chef
Cake Decorator	Sushi Chef

We believe passionately that our mantra--Shop Well. Eat Well. Live Well.--means nothing unless we hire well and treat our people well, too. We value the contributions of each of our employees and encourage them to grow within the company. With new stores in new markets, new opportunities for career advancement are continuous.

Lolla too crazy to keep up with

The city's trendiest spots were swarming with celebrities from the sports and entertainment world during Lollapalooza weekend—from what I hear. I didn't actually see too many of them. In what became a recurring theme throughout the weekend, they seemed to arrive after I'd just left or I simply didn't notice them.

I didn't spot any bold names taking in Chet Haze's (1) performance at The Underground on Thursday, so imagine my surprise when I heard the next day that "Scream" star David Arquette (2), "Twilight" star Kellan Lutz (3) and "Superbad" star Christopher Mintz-Plasse (4) all stopped by that night.

I also didn't see Lutz or Mintz-Plasse when they stopped by the Belve Music Lounge party at the W Chicago-City Center on Friday and Saturday, respectively, even though I was there both nights. Or Arquette at the Rolling Stone brunch at Paris Club's upstairs lounge, Studio Paris, on Saturday. Arquette, of course, got there after I'd just left for the Gilt City rooftop pool party at EnV Chicago.

(I did, however, see Mintz-Plasse and actor Simon Rex at the latter party. Mintz-Plasse also stopped by Public House on Thursday.)

Why is spotting the celeb myself important? Because I walk away with details I might not get from sources. I might not have known former Bull Kirk Hinrich danced on a booth or that the Dallas Mavericks' Shawn Marion knows every word to Bell Biv DeVoe's "Poison" if I hadn't seen them with my own eyes Saturday at Studio Paris.

And I wouldn't have known Disturbed frontman David Draiman wears those tusk-like labret piercings even to a semi-upscale charity event such as GALapalooza, which benefits Parkways Foundation, in Grant Park.

That doesn't mean I spent the entire weekend scouring bars and clubs for rocker and Lollapalooza founder Perry Farrell, (5) who I hear dined at Japonais on Thursday, or "Saturday Night Live" cast member Jason Sudeikis, (6) who I hear was spotted at Second City's "Southside of Heaven" show, Paris Club and Hub 51. I just kept an eye out for famous faces wherever I was.

But I couldn't be everywhere, so I needed to rely on other people for most sightings. That's how I know Faith Hill (7) bought a kimono at Sofia and fellow country music star Brad Paisley (8) picked out guitar pedals at the Chicago Music Exchange on Friday afternoon and the N.Y. Yankees' Derek Jeter dined at Roots Handmade Pizza, Gibsons Bar and Steakhouse and Chicago Cut Steakhouse last week. I also hear the guys from Muse dined at N9NE Steakhouse on Thursday.

Around 3 a.m. Sunday—after I'd walked by Bruno Mars at The Underground but failed to see Cee Lo Green and Nas—I decided to call it a night on what had been a party-heavy weekend. Not long after that, I received a text: "Lindsay Lohan (9) got here the second you walked out." Of course she did.

Leave it to Ashton Kutcher (above) to make a political joke for a teenage audience. "Don't ever charge anything on a credit card if you don't already have the money in the bank to pay for it," the new "Two and a Half Men" star said Sunday at the Teen Choice Awards in L.A., according to The Associated Press. Easy for a millionaire to say. In actual awards news, Taylor Swift came away the big winner with six trophies, including ultimate choice. Selena Gomez won the ultimate hottie prize among her five awards. Now that's money in the bank. GETTY IMAGES PHOTO

Philly fanatics

Your forecast for the next few years: a whole lot of dark humor and guilty pleasures. FX renewed "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia" (above) for its eighth and ninth seasons, making it the longest-running comedy series in basic-cable history. The network also picked up "Louie" for its third season and "Wilfred," starring Elijah Wood, for its second, according to EW.COM. FX PHOTO

Eight is enough

The end is near for "Desperate Housewives," show creator Marc Cherry revealed to critics during ABC's fall previews Sunday. "The only thing harder than creating a hit show is knowing when to end it," he said. "I am also aware of people overstaying their welcome. I didn't want that to happen to 'Desperate Housewives.'" Apparently eight seasons is that time.

Big problem

Antwan Patton—better known as OutKast rapper Big Boi (left)—was arrested on drug charges Sunday in Miami, according to CNN. Patton was charged with illegal possession of

Viagra and Ecstasy pills, MDMA powder and drug paraphernalia with intent to use, police said. Wait, Viagra AND Ecstasy? GETTY IMAGES PHOTO

A 'Super 8' whodunit

In a potential embarrassment for Howard Stern (left), a pirated version of "Super 8" appears to have come from a DVD screener given to the satellite radio host, deadline.com reports. "H. Stern" appears in the corner of the image. No word on how it could have gotten out of Stern's possession.

THE DIGIT

$54 MILLION

That's how much "Rise of the Planet of the Apes" earned domestically in its debut weekend to take the No. 1 spot in theaters, according to Reuters. "The Smurfs" smurfed to the second spot with $21 million in its second weekend.
